Breaking the Cycle

Women, Water and the Search for Equity

WHAT'S THE CONNECTION BETWEEN WOMEN AND WATER?

Throughout the world, women are intimately linked to water resources because, of their roles and responsibilities in daily life, managing water. Since women are often the ones who, draw, carry, and provide household water, they are in the front lines of their communities' and countries' water issues. Global challenges like over consumption, population growth, privatization and climate change all affect the quality and availability of water, and put a strain on limited freshwater systems. Water scarcity and contamination disproportionately impact low-income women and girls. For many girls who must walk miles to access clean water, school is not a reality. Without a basic education or the ability to earn a living wage, earning less, many women become locked into a vicious cycle of poverty. This is a global effect that impacts communities and countries socially, economically and environmentally.

Should we be concerned about biodiversity?

What we know:
The Earth is losing species at an alarming rate!

- Some scientists estimate that as many as 3 species per hour are going extinct and 20,000 extinctions occur each year.
- when species of plants and animals go extinct, many other species are affected.
